The aim of this study is to evaluate the effect of pentoxifylline (PTF) on a mouse skin ischemia model at doses of 1.25, 2.5 and 5 mg/kg. The peak of adenosine, IL-1β and prostaglandin E2 concentration in ischemic skin of PTF treated mice increased significantly compared to those in the model group. The number of leukocyte adhesion increased in the ischemic skin of the PTF 2.5 mg/kg group compared to that of the model group. The PTF 1.25 and 2.5 mg/kg dose showed an increased endothelial nitric oxide synthase (eNOS) activity. The total activity of iNOS in the ischemic skin of the PTF 1.25 mg/kg group was decreased significantly compared to the model group. The phosphorylated eN 4bc0debe42
