Why did you develop this game? Because I really like basketball, and I think basketball is an interesting game. Please consider developing this app to my mom. Please develop my mom's app. Why do you ask that? You know, she is my mother. I think she deserves to have an app. How can I contact you? You can contact me on my e-mail address: [email protected] If you have any questions or suggestions, please feel free to contact me. I'm open to all your suggestions and would be grateful for any suggestions or contributions. Have a nice day! The last decade of research has consistently shown that two conditions known to impair the immune system and increase the risk for chronic infections (smoking, obesity, diabetes, etc.) are associated with significantly higher incidence of cervical neoplasia. Therefore, our primary aim is to examine the impact of these and other conditions on the risk for histologically-defined CIN. Specifically, we will measure cotinine levels in sputum from smokers and non-smokers to confirm cotinine as a valid marker of exposure to tobacco and investigate the association between cotinine levels in sputum and histologic cervical diagnosis. Similarly, we will measure the HOMA and A1C from a limited number of diabetics to confirm our findings that diabetes is a significant risk factor for CIN. We will also include a condition that is emerging as an increasing risk for CIN and cancer (HPV) in our study, since in a recent national cancer report, it was found that HPV-positive women (women with HPV-16 and/or -18) had a higher incidence of CIN3 and cancer than women with HPV-negative (HPV-6 and -11) cervix. Preliminary analyses from studies at our center have shown that HPV-16 is associated with the most aggressive forms of CIN and cancer. Therefore, our secondary aim is to investigate the effect of HPV on the risk for CIN
