Javi Aldana Hi there, Finally, a free alternative to Internet Explorer's URL input. URL input is one of the most common tasks for web browsers and for web developers. It appears that this cool url input is not available on Firefox. It's the last update since Firefox 15 for Web Developers. Firefox Developer Edition includes a hidden special setting called "Enable Spell Checking for URLs", which allows URL input for developers to have a more intuitive experience. But there is still no such feature in Firefox to make us developers feel more awesome at writing code. Developer Edition is perfect for Web Developers, Web designers, Web designers with an addiction for stylish apps, and others who love Firefox to show it off. Not only does it have a more intuitive url input, but the black list functionality is unmatched by Chrome or other browsers. Please don't forget to share this to other developers and designers, if you enjoy the app! url input features - Large, clear, and intuitive input. - Configurable blacklist. - Can be used to convert the entered URL to the object in front of the form. - On blur, it highlight the text and show the hex code of the entered URL. Note: - The image you see is the 09e8f5149f
