Tecmo Koei has a very straightforward request for this demo. The game should run in standard Fullscreen, and use a controller. The game has a built in control mapping that has been pretty well thought out, and has been included in this demo. The Keyboard is used for things like the menu and triggers. The controller is used to control your main character in the demo, and to move the camera. This is easily done with the control map included, but if you don't have a controller you can still play the demo.
